Then and there the influence for better English and speech from the head of that school could not be seen or felt. Fellow superintendents, this was one of the greatest lessons of my life. I trust my calling the incident to your attention may induce you to resolve as I did. Another very serious problem is to secure efficient and well-trained teachers who really believe in their work and whose influence for speech for the deaf is sufficiently strong to overbalance the opposing influences. The standard of our teaching force must be kept high. We should select teachers who have normal or university training whenever possible. Successful public-school teachers with special training in speech teaching and methods employed in educating the deaf usually not only make good in our work but often turn out to be our very best educators. I should not hesitate to secure real teachers from the public schools for intermediate and advanced oral classes, for I know from experience that they will, almost without exception, do most satisfactory work, often bringing valuable suggestions and influences which tend to strengthen and maintain high educational standards. Another barrier, perhaps the greatest of all, encountered in obtaining desirable results in the teaching of speech in combined-system schools is the almost constant use of the manual alphabet and the sign language in schoolrooms and elsewhere. In most combined-system schools great effort is exerted to suppress, especially in oral classes, the use of the...
