How can we fix it? There is no silver bullet but there are a lot of small changes and a few big ones. Finding out how to keep teachers who care in the classroom is critical, and it s not just more money (though God knows, that would help). It is hard to find a teacher who s been teaching in public schools for 5-15 years. They burn out by 5 or they already have over 15 years and are just waiting to retire at 20. College for 4-5 years, maybe a graduate degree, take on enough debt to last a lifetime, for a job that pays well, not enough to raise a family and pay back that debt. And no combat pay! Even though you may be stabbed, shot, or maligned. Is it rewarding? Definitely. With your students in your classroom, it s what you imagined. But then you have to factor in the administration, which any ex-teacher will tell you is the reason they are not there any more. Schooled: A Teacher s Memoir is for teachers, education students, parents and the students themselves. The story of a lifetime of teaching and learning, what it was to learn real writing , new math , and coming of age in the 60s Vietnam/civil rights/chaos era in the South. From a career in sales set aside for a higher calling to teach only to discover that teaching is sales, this teacher s life provides a clear lens to look through and see what needs to be kept, removed or added.
